ever if he had left Hongkong out of his book, or had made an honest effort to be accurate in the statements he has made regarding the colony, we could have found it possible to forgive him for what he says about other places. It bas been the lot of Hongkong to be grossly misrepresented in books, newspapers and official dispatches as a colony of bloated millionaires. Everybody who writes anything about it begins like Mr Caine -- Forty years ago Hong- ita right during the coming seeling season kong was only a barren island, -and then goes on to ask an astonished world to gaze on it in its present splendou: and glory. It is one point in Mr Caine's favour, however, that he does not wrong us so much as some other have done in the way of making state-sending out of an extra batch of officeless officials with whom the Colonial Office doesn't know what to do. To be. told that it is impossible to imagine a more beautiful spectacle than that presented from the deck of the steamer in Hongkong harbour, and that the white villas and gardens of the Europeans on the slopes above the town glisten like pearls and emeralds, and that there is a brown native town, and that the blue sea is necked with a thousand little sails, with the British fleet a-riding at anchor in the fore-ground is only what 1,50 we would expect. The statements may not be strictly accurate, and they may be exceptionable as regards their composition, but at all events they are comparatively harmless. But, as Mr Caine 7.50 0.75 himself remarks, 'It is not always thus. In summer, terrific hurricanes, called typhoons, brew in the misnamed Pacific ments such as would lead to an increase

Ocean and visit Hongkong in the full strength of their devastating circle, and this leads him to remark that one of the finest of the noble build-10 ings on the Kowloong side of the harbour is the Observatory, on the roof of which is a pole and red ball, the dreaded typhcon's warning. Having thus placed the sometimes erratic, but, on 2 doz. the whole, useful time-ball in a pictur-Pints, esque position on the top of the Observatory and converted it into an object of dread. Mr Caine proceeds to heap Pelion on Ossa in the following wonderful manner :- When the glass begins to fall anxious watch is kept on the red ball, and when it runs up to the top of the pole a sight worth seeing begins. Anyone who knows Hongkong, even slightly, would think on reading a pass-Case. Per Bot. age like this that somebody had been taking a mean advantage of Mr Caine, and had been leading a member of the British House of Commons astray. But it is unnecessary to seek such an explanation. Mr Caine writes with a joyous freedom from the blighting influence of cold, hard fact that statements of this kind seem quite natural to him. He will not be restrained by 0.75 anything. Nobody but he would dare to change, without a word of apology, The P. & O. Co.'s a. s. The Chairman said-Gentlemen, the report and accounts, having been in your hands for some time past, may be taken as read. I regret that we have not a more natisfactory statement to lay before you, as in addition to the losses sustained through the failure of the late General Managers, the Company had for the last six months of the year, to contend with an unusually dull state of trade in the Philippines : and with increased competition for the little freight that was offering. We have however done our utmost to minimise these misfortunes. as much as possible by reducing the working expenses and by taking the Diamante off the line, as we find that under existing circumstances she is unable to run succossfully against vessels of larger capacity and proportionally less running expenses. Every endeavour has been made to dispose of this vessel at a fair market price; and we are in hopes that the negotiations now pending for her sale may be brought to a nines and 107 runs. successful conclusion.
